Indigenous Broadcasting Program

Indigenous radio services help to promote language maintenance and cultural development and provide training in Indigenous communities. They also provide entertainment and help disseminate health, education and other information.

In 2008–09, the Indigenous Broadcasting Program (IBP) is providing $14,244,000 to support Indigenous community broadcasting projects in metropolitan, regional and remote Australian locations.

This includes support for:

- Indigenous community radio stations in metropolitan Melbourne, Perth, Sydney, Brisbane and Darwin
- Indigenous community radio stations in regional centres
- Remote Indigenous [radio] Broadcasting Services (RIBS)
- Remote Indigenous Media Organisations (RIMOs) which provide technical support and training for RIBS on a regional basis
- Indigenous organisations producing radio content and distributing it to Indigenous broadcasters
- relevant training providers
- Imparja Television service
- Indigenous media peak bodies.
