Arts funding requires better scrutiny and financial oversight. Funded projects, products, events, exhibitions etc should demonstrate positive impact, not just delivery or capability. The Australian Government should never fund artists, art organisations or events that produce content that is intended to vilify people of another religion [REDACTED].

The Australian Government must be transparent about its decision making about who gets to visit Australia and who is denied access rather than cravenly allowing people who support particular political or religious viewpoints. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] Audiences are bored and confused by this type of meaningless, embarrassing, offensive nonsense that corrodes our national identity. Use tax-payers money properly and support arts and creative endeavour that nurtures all Australians not phonies and junkets for administrators and minorities with shrill voices. Authenticity and meaning and beauty will do more to nurture cultural audiences than inclusion for the sake of inclusion.
