As someone who has studied in the arts and is pursuing a career in the industry, I think the NCP to be a sorely needed start to support the arts in Australia. However, I believe this could go furtger to demonstrate true support for creatives and make them feel valued. What I would like to see most in our country is a basic universal income for arts scheme as trialled in Ireland.

We also desperately need the cost of studying humanities to be reduced. The fact that many politicians who implemented this decision received free or low cost degrees is despicable. The humanities and social sciences are more critical than ever, and the right to access them must be protected.
