Games are currently sidelined in funding arrangements when compared to other mediums despite their wide reach and overwhelming variety of experiences they can offer.

As a medium they cross over into all areas of the life and the arts now.

Games offer opportunities for small and large teams, experimental or commercial opportunities and all of these aspects need to be reflected in funding with those involved in administering funds and supporting the artists making them understanding the specific needs of a constantly evolving craft.

There is so much that can be done with games that has yet to be explored, Australia should be at the forefront, it's far too easy when the projects or support don't exist here for those that create to go overseas, having been in the industry for over 20 years myself only a small fraction remain here growing our local knowledge and talent.
