Short submission (text box 500 words or less)

The next National Cultural Policy must include strong goals, commitments, targets and actions to support Palestinian creatives working on this continent. This includes tangible ways to support and show solidarity with anti-genocide artists, authors, musicians and performers - including dedicated and significant funding for Palestinian creatives. Further, the government must take a strong stance against anti-Palestinian racism in the arts - including in festivals and events. If the government is serious about Pillar 1 and Pillar 2, it must foreground the work of Indigenous artists who are working against settler colonialism and genocide, both on this continent and in Palestine.
