

National Cultural Policy Submission

1471954

Public and anonymous

Short submission (text box 500 words or less)

Diverse Cultures can co-exist without affecting each other's economic activities.

It is important all cultures are respected for what they are. Nobody has the right to judge another culture without being part of that culture for at least for two generations preceding the person intending to make observations on the culture in consideration.

Laws must protect cultural identities very strongly just as individual identities are protected.

"My way or no-way approach taken by any group" is a form of cultural terrorism.