I'm an emerging artist affiliated with a Western Sydney disability and arts Not-for-Profit.

This National Cultural Policy, I imagine, is one that encourages and protects people in our community who have talent and/ or vision to create more experiences, ideas, etc that enhance our multi cultural and diverse culture.

I've been able to see a few of my creative come full circle by co-facilitating workshops and having my art shown in galleries. My sense of self is changing and I know more can be done to assist people who may be restricted in their experiences to hospital or home care.

Prior to joining this Not-for-Profit, I felt there weren't any spaces that could assist me wanting to be creative and expressive while still accommodate for my fluctuating health issues.

Opening pathways for deaf, disabled and neurodivergent people may lower risk of antagonistic or unsettling behaviours in the community. Consider exploring how offering these pathways may lead to better quality of life that has ripple effects on the wider community.
