I'd like to see Australia become a global powerhouse for the arts - from education during school years, to supporting cultural institutions and careers. This should include supporting classical disciplines to new media. The proposed five pillars are underwhelming. It reflects the banal. Australia needs bolder principles and direction supporting a 20 year vision. Australia currently hovers in the bottom third of OECD countries. Yet the arts makes a far, far greater contribution. Australia's arts budget and vision needs a total braver rethink, Please!
